

PEW RENT NAMES AT ST. PATRICK'S,
COLUMBUS, 1855 TO 1858

A valuable source for the names of the English-speaking Catholics in Columbus in the early years is the book of records of pew rents of St. Patrick's church, 1855 to 1858. Holy Cross was the only other church at the time, serving German-speaking Catholics.

During the years of the records it was the custom that pew rent receipts were the main support of the parish. Several pages of the old book, now preserved in the Diocesan Archives, are missing.

Although many names are found in the records through the four years, most of them were for only a year or two. Apparently, moved by the spirit of the times, they followed the "lure of the West."

The names are given here alphabetically. No attempt is made to indicate the number of years each name appeared in the Pew Rent book.
